Description

What will I be doing?

Under the guidance of a mentor, you will engage in a community of scientists and researchers and experience project planning and management; strategic and scientific communications; environmental public participation requirements for National Environmental Policy Act and Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act; Rehabilitation Act Section 508 compliance; and Plain Language Act requirements.

As a participant, you will receive training and gain experience and familiarity with a variety of environmental disciplines through environmental document review and editing. You will have the opportunity to apply your environmental knowledge and understanding of engineering and scientific principles and grow your skills to help modify and create environmental reports that are understandable to a variety of audiences and comply with environmental and communication related laws and policies. Along the way, you will engage in activities and research in several areas, including collaborating with U.S. Army civilian environmental professionals at the U.S. Army Environmental Command and Army installations worldwide to improve environmental documents prior to public release

Why should I apply?

You will have the opportunity to interact with environmental public affairs specialists, environmental support managers, biologists, geologists, entomologists, archeologists, environmental restoration managers, NEPA practitioners, as well as engineers.

Where will I be located?

Joint Base San Antonio - Fort Sam Houston, Texas

About USAEC

The U.S. Army Environmental Command (USAEC) story began in 1972 when the Army created the Program Manager for Demilitarization of Chemical Materiel to manage the day-to-day operations of destroying the nation's stockpile of toxic chemical agents and munitions. Over the years our role has expanded to include many new responsibilities around the world. Through all the changes, our mission of ensuring maximum use of Army training lands through sound environmental practices and stewardship remains.

The U.S. Army Environmental Command (USAEC) proudly delivers environmental services and solutions in support of the Army's Environmental Program, enabling Army readiness and sustainability. For more than 40 years, USAEC has provided the knowledge, tools, and programs that support ready and resilient Soldiers, installations, and commands by balancing military training with sound environmental practices. Elements of the program include environmental awareness, environmental analysis, environmental restoration, environmental compliance, and environmental protection.

The Operations, Planning and Programming Division at USAEC is offering a bachelors/masters level opportunity at the Joint Base San Antonio - Fort Sam Houston, Texas facility. For more information about the USAEC, please visit
