Description The Naval Medical Research Unit Dayton (NAMRU-D) is offering a fellowship opportunity.

What will I be doing?

As an Oak Ridge Institute for Science and Education (ORISE) participant, you will participate alongside an interdisciplinary team investigating aeromedical needs within US Naval Aviation regarding health and human performance.

Why should I apply?

Under the guidance of your mentor, you will expand and gain skills in collecting, analyzing, and modeling epidemiological data. Additionally, during this appointment, you will have the opportunity to conduct various laboratory and field data collections relevant to these efforts, you will learn to design laboratory experiments, perform field measurements, analyze human performance data, and communicate research findings through publications and presentations.

Where will I be located?

Dayton, Ohio

What is the anticipated start date?

Exact start dates will be determined at the time of selection and in coordination with the selected candidate. Applications are reviewed on an ongoing basis, and internships or fellowships will be filled as qualified candidates are identified.

What is the appointment length?

An ORISE appointment period can be a short-term (less than 2 weeks), summer (10-12 weeks), or yearlong appointment. Appointments may be extended depending on funding availability, project assignment, program rules, and availability of the participant.

What are the provisions?

You will receive a stipend to be determined by NAMRU-D. Stipends are typically based on a participant's academic standing, discipline, experience, and research facility location. Other provisions may include the following:

- Health Insurance Supplement (Participants are eligible to purchase health insurance through ORISE)
- Relocation Allowance
- Training and Travel Allowance

About NAMRU-D

Naval Medical Research Unit Dayton conducts research on environmental health effects and aerospace medicine, addressing health and performance challenges faced by service members in operational military environments.
