Description A fellowship opportunity is available in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health, US Department of Health and Human Services, in Washington, DC.

The fellow will serve as science policy research assistant to the members of the Federal Advisory Committee, the Presidential Advisory Council on Combating Antibiotic-Resistant Bacteria (PACCARB). Main activities will include supporting PACCARB members and working groups by conducting research on issues and topics related to policies and strategies surrounding antibiotic and antimicrobial resistance (AMR). Other opportunities will include communication with federal and non-federal stakeholders AMR, in addition to drafting of reports, letters, white papers, and other forms of scientific writing. The fellow may also serve as administrative and logistical support to facilitate the operations of PACCARB including the coordination of working group meetings, both in-person and virtual. The candidate will learn about the federal policy development process and will work in a team environment in support of the operations of the PACCARB. Candidates will be provided instruction/direction by the PACCARB Designated Federal Officer and/or Committee Manager.

Although the application deadline is June 12, 2019, applications will be reviewed on a rolling-basis.

This program, administered by ORAU through its contract with the U.S. Department of Energy to manage the Oak Ridge Institute for Science and Education, was established through an interagency agreement between DOE and HHS.
