Description

The USAISR is one of six research laboratories within the U.S. Army Medical Research and Materiel Command (USAMRMC). The institute is the U.S. Army's lead research laboratory for improving the care of combat casualties. Its mission is to provide requirements driven combat casualty care medical solutions and products for injured soldiers from self -aid through definitive care across the full spectrum of military operations. Additionally it provides state-of-the-art burn, trauma, and critical care to DoD beneficiaries around the world.

Participants in this research opportunity will study the effects of analgesic interventions on animal behavior and stress. Researching under the mentorship of world-class U.S. Army medical professionals, the participant will analyze the effects of drugs on behavioral responses and biomarker gene expression in the rat model. The intern's research will help identify differentially expressed genes/metabolites, the typical end products of the cellular perturbations. The participant will collaborate with mentoring primary investigators to find signatures of treatment efficacy.
